Enter with curiosity. Read, measure, calculate. The news is never new. The information is always on the edge of knowledge. Suspect, hypothesize, prospect. A photograph only records history. Our age is its youngest at this moment. Exit with more curiosity. Then, when a hint of confusion seeps in, remember as much as possible. Remember before it vanishes in the thick fog of early morning humidity.

There cannot be an actual end date. There cannot be a nonchalant wave of the hand as if to wipe away an inconvenience. There cannot be a ceremonial burning. There cannot be forgetfulness. There cannot be fear. There cannot be, but there is. And then confusion seeps in. Just remember.
